W. A. COTTON, AGE 89 YEARS, TELLS OF EARLY LIFE

Banker and Active in Many Civic Affairs; Now in Glendale on Visit

Although not yet past the 90 year milestone, W. A. Cotton of Nebraska City, Neb., aged 89 years, who "dropped in" the other day for a visit with his daughter, Mrs. C. M. Hale of 1003 Boynton street, may well enjoy the compliment of being called the youngest looking and acting "90-year-old" in Glendale at present.

Mr. Cotton is kept pretty busy with his activities as president of one bank and director of another and then he is interested in all the civic and social affairs of Nebraska City and in addition is an active member of the Presbyterian church, so it was necessary for him to steal a few weeks' time to run over to California for a visit with his daughter and to attend the celebration last Sunday in Brookside Park of the 81st birthday of his sister, Mrs. Sarah Beman of 315 West Los Feliz road.

Born Upon Farm
"Yes, I was born on a farm in Attica, New York, March 7, 1833," said Mr. Cotton, when he was urged to reminisce a bit. "My ancestors were English, one of them, Rev. John Cotton, having come in 1643 from Boston, Eng., to America. He was a widely known minister and the city of Boston was named after the Boston in England because he came from there. He was pastor of the reformed church in Boston, Massachusetts."

"I left New York when I was 21 years old and traveled by rail and boat to Chicago and then on up into Wisconsin. I later went to live in Nebraska City, where I have made my home for fifty years."

"One of my most interesting recollections is of seeing the first railroad built from New York to the Great Lakes. It was the New York Central and the construction was most interesting. Large timbers were laid on the road bed, then another four-inch wooden strip and on this the three and a half iron rail, which was spiked down."

Engines Very Different
"The coaches and engines of that day presented a very different appearance than the ones of (Continued on Page 10)."

Changes In Machine Shop at High School

The machine shop at Glendale Union High school is now being equipped with separate tool drawers for each student so that the classes may be conducted next term as efficiently as possible.

The "hour system," which will be followed next term, means that students will only give an hour to machine shop work instead of two periods of forty minutes each as heretofore.

However, in the past students have been obliged to waste a great deal of time at the commencement of each day's work in machine shop work in their locker room getting out their tools and getting ready for work.

Under the new system, students will come directly to the machine shop room and will not have to waste time in the locker room. Individual hand tools, which are used frequently, will be kept in handy drawers and they will be able to go directly to work.

Morgan N. Smith, instructor of machine shop work, and Walter Gorman, instructor in cabinet work, have been busy for several weeks installing the 43 extra drawers.

About $500 worth of equipment will be added to that already in the machine shop before school opens, according to Mr. Smith. A large planer, which will cost in the neighborhood of $2,000, is now on its way west from Boston and a new lathe which will cost about $500, is expected in a week or two from San Francisco. Bids are being received also on a large number of tools which will be ordered in the near future.

Methodist Ball Team to Play City Employees

The Methodist Episcopal church base ball team is to play its first organized game tomorrow evening at 5:30 o'clock when the churchmen will meet the City Hall team on the Intermediate school grounds on Wilson avenue.

The Methodist players have been holding practice games among themselves for several Friday evenings past, and have now reached the point where they challenge almost any one to a game.

The battery for the Methodists will be Roy Cunningham, pitcher, while Dr. C. R. Lusby will catch. The city employees have not yet picked their battery. The players are to be selected after a final practice to be held this afternoon.

It is expected that the Friday twilight ball games will become a regular event in Glendale.

UNDERGOES OPERATION
Mrs. F. L. Harris of 521 West Fairmont avenue had her appendix removed this morning at the Glendale Research hospital.

Many Fingerprints Left by Burglar In Two Residences

For sale: Fine collection of finger prints, cheap!

The Glendale police department is now searching for a Sherlock Holmes clever enough to match about 1687 finger prints with the hands of at least one talented housebreaker.

Ralph E. Berry's home at 205 North Adams street was entered early last evening by a careless robber who thoughtlessly spilled a bottle of ink in ransacking one of the drawers in the desk. This darksome fluid was smeared around most generously and imbedded on many articles of furniture are "finger prints" galore.

After passing long enough about $12, the burglar proceeded a few feet away to the home of W. E. Chandler at 108 North Adams street. Here he made a valiant attempt to wash the ink from his hands at the bath tub. More finger prints followed.

Mrs. Berry is almost willing to forgive the housebreaker for spilling the ink, however, because in his excitement he overlooked her pocketbook which she had hidden near the kitchen sink.

Mrs. Chandler does not feel so grateful. At her home a watch, jewelry and valuable trinkets were stolen.

After looking over the scene of the operations, members of the local police department admitted that the "amateurs" had made "some mess."

HALIFAX, N. S., Aug. 10.—Eleven members of the crew of the British light cruiser Raleigh, which went on the rocks off Belle Island, were reported missing today.

Reject Proposals

LONDON, Aug. 10.—The British cabinet this afternoon rejected Premier Poincare's proposals for the economic rehabilitation of Europe, being considered at the present conference.

Governors Confer

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 10.—Informed by Governor Preus that the northwest is facing the most serious public emergency in years on account of the fuel famine, Governors Blaine, Wisconsin; Nestos, North Dakota, and Masters, South Dakota, met in conference with Governor Preus at the capitol here today.

Guards on Duty

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Approximately 10 per cent of the national guard troops in the country are now on duty in connection with the railroad and mine strikes, according to figures compiled by the war department this afternoon. Fifteen states have troops in the field.

Steals $30,000

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 10.—Lewis Islip, secretary of the Earle Fruit Company and a well known clubman of this city, confessed to police today to charges of embezzling approximately $30,000 of his firm's funds. C. B. Muir, auditor of the company, stated formal complaint charging Islip with embezzlement will be sworn to today. Islip, according to the confession, said he had lost heavily in speculation and taken money to cover his losses.

Cabinet May Act

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—From some of President Harding's closest advisers today came assertions that apparently there is no hope of the Cleveland coal conference establishing peace and that the government shortly will be forced to take some "positive and drastic" action to insure the country against impending coal famine. It is probable that at tomorrow's cabinet meeting, some definite remedial steps will be brought forward, but for the present, it was said today, the government must look toward Cleveland for relief.

TRUSTEES OF HIGH SCHOOL DISCUSS BOND PROJECT

Board States Its Views on Situation; Mass Meeting Takes Place Tonight

The board of trustees of the Glendale Union High school asks the public to the following statement regarding the high school situation:

At a mass meeting called for 8 p. m., Thursday, August 10, at the high school, the following subjects will come up for discussion:

(a) The proposed bond issue to complete the plant on Verdugo road site, as per plans submitted.

(b) The purchase of a high school site in the northwest part of the city of Glendale.

(c) The use of the present high school plant.

(d) The establishment of junior high schools.

(e) And the further development of our school systems, including all the schools in the Glendale Union High school district.

First on the list of subjects under consideration is the proposed bond issue to complete the plant on Verdugo road according to plans submitted. The plans referred to are for a plant complete in all departments, with a capacity of 2500 students.

Not Enough, Claim
The amount of $600,000 which was voted at the last bond election is not enough to build a plant as suggested, but will only build one, if all departments are included large enough to accommodate about 1500 students. The architect figures he could build a plant for 2000 students for this amount, but the shops and gymnasiums would not be provided for. Demand in the Glendale Union school district is for vocational subjects. Last year's increase over the year before was 38.7 per cent—this next term will likely show a corresponding gain and if the same ratio is carried out by the time the plant is completed, the high school enrollment will be nearly 3000 students. If the present plant takes care of the ninth grade, the Senior High school would have a probable enrollment on the opening day of about 2100, and junior high schools, if inaugurated, would have approximately 900 from the ninth grade. From an economic standpoint, this is a very serious situation.

Banquet and Social Meet
Of Credit Association Greatly Enjoyed

"Why can't the bank presidents of Glendale get together and accommodate the merchants on Saturday nights," asked Seymour G. Smith of the Glendale Groceria last night at the banquet of the Glendale Merchants' Credit association.

Mr. Smith explained that every Saturday afternoon and evening he is forced to turn away several hundred dollars of business because he hasn't cash on hand to cash pay checks. In Burbank, he stated, a number of banks are open on Saturday evenings so that the merchants may obtain cash, and if Burbank can do it, Glendale certainly ought to be able to, in his opinion.

Although the dinner of the Credit association, which was held at the Broadway Inn last night, was primarily a social event, several topics of general interest were discussed.

Plenty of Surprises
The affair was given by the losers in the recent membership campaign of the association as a forfeit which it had been agreed the losers would pay the winners.

"Major" W. P. Potter, head of the losers, presented C. E. Stuart of the Glendale Pharmacy, who acted as a jovial and entertaining toastmaster. Mr. Stuart was chosen, among other reasons, for the fact that he brought in the most memberships in the recent drive.

The Shrine club orchestra, composed of A. M. Kelly, E. A. Floyd, M. Kaufman and L. R. Mason, furnished a number of musical features during the evening.

A surprise was furnished the guests when extra glasses were put at each place. However, it developed that they were for Green Hill ginger ale, individual bottles of which were furnished by A. D. Mars of the S. W. Brown company.

The meal was frequently interrupted for the winners to rejoice and the losers to drown their sorrows in song. Ole Andresen, who furnished the musical program for the evening, led the hundred-odd guests in singing "My Wild Irish Rose."

Music and More Music
Toastmaster Stuart then announced that "Caruso" Ole Andresen would render a solo. Instead, Mr. Andresen sang the verse of "Let the Rest of the World Go By," everyone joining in on the chorus.

At this juncture the dinner was interrupted by outbursts of applause and humorous remarks as Mayor Spencer Robinson came in. "Peggy O'Neil" was sung first (Continued on Page 7)

Rev. W. E. Edmonds to Address Local Post

The Rev. W. E. Edmonds will address the Glendale post, American Legion, at its regular weekly meeting tomorrow, Friday night, according to an announcement made this morning by Vice-Commander Chalmers Day.

Rev. Edmonds is pastor of the Presbyterian church and should attract a large number of former service men.

Kills Two Rabbits With One Bullet; Says So Himself

John Rommel, Sr., head of the Rommel Construction company, took his son, John, Jr., out to Riverside county the first of the week to hunt jack-rabbits.

Young John had hunted in the Kentucky hills, but the California mountains gave him new thrills.

And when his dad killed two rabbits with one shot there was some commotion. Seems he fired at one and the other became scared and jumped so quickly the bullet hit it also. At least that's what they say.

John Porter Has Marble He Would Like to Lose, Eh?

A boy, a marble and an inclination.

That is the start of the story as to why John Porter, 7-year-old son of Mrs. A. M. Granvie of 755 North Isabel street, is in the Glendale Sanitarium and Hospital.

For two weeks he went well, stomach aching about and a little or nothing, although he exhibited a terrible thirst.

Fearful that he might starve to death he was taken to the hospital where truth will out. He had swallowed the marble.

An X-ray photograph located it in his esophagus and there it has stayed. No amount of coaxing now seems to induce the muscles to let loose the prize tidbit.

As a result Johnny is living on a milk diet and awaiting for the surgeons' decision as to what it is best to do. They hate to cut him open for a half-penny marble, even if it is an "aggie."

CIVIC QUESTIONS CONSIDERED BY BUSINESS MEN

Mrs. Porter, who was the wife of the late William S. Porter, died August 1, 1922 at a private sanitarium in Los Angeles, where she had been for several months.

Late in the afternoon Mrs. Card served the company with fruit salad, cake and tea.

REALTY BOARD TO MEET WEDNESDAY IN WOODLANDS

Accepts Invitation to Use Newport Pavilion; Discuss High School Issue

The Glendale Realty board is to hold its meeting next Wednesday in the Newport pavilion, Verdugo Woodlands, it was decided at the meeting yesterday noon. On account of the fact that the entire population is expected to be at the new city park at Verdugo Woodlands on that day, it was proposed that the board meet in the park.

W. L. Twining of the F. P. Newport company then invited the members to make the short trip to the pavilion and hold their meeting there, to return to the park afterward. The invitation was accepted with applause and it was decided that members should bring their families with them and that the meeting should be more of a social nature.

Cameron D. Thom, president of the board, spoke of the barbecue given the members Tuesday night by Mr. Twining and a rising vote of thanks was tendered to the host of the evening before.

Judge Summerfield Present
John W. Summerfield, judge of the superior court, was a guest at the meeting yesterday noon. He was introduced by Mr. Thom as a lifelong friend and one who will receive his unqualified support in running for re-election.

Judge Summerfield mentioned the fact that he had been on the bench of the district court for fourteen years, and the superior bench for two years. In closing a short talk he stated that any members of the Glendale Realty board who should come up before him in alimony or divorce cases would receive serious consideration.

George U. Moyle, principal of the Glendale Union High school, then addressed the board on the school situation in Glendale. He spoke of "the past and present high standard of the school system as one of the factors contributing to the growth of this city, since good schools attract families with children."

"The critical time with respect to the school problem is now upon us," declared Mr. Moyle. He followed with a brief history of the school system here, and the (Continued on Page 10).

Members of the Glendale Music club and their friends may make reservations to Mrs. Warren Roberts, 617 East Elk avenue, by September 4. A musical program will also be provided to follow the luncheon.

Why Not Proceed At Once With Work On New High School Buildings?

The land has been purchased for a new High school site.

A $600,000 bond issue has been voted for new buildings as recommended by the architect and the board prior to the election.

Now, call for construction bids. If the $600,000 is not sufficient to satisfy the lowest responsible bidder, make up the deficiency from the sale of all or a part of the old High school property.

Action is what is needed now that the boys and girls of the Union High school district may be provided with more room at as early a date as possible.

The old High school is too near the business section of the city to be used for school purposes.

Romance of Ching and Dickie, One of Orient, Other of Occident, Ended by Death

A marriage of the accident and orient has been revealed in the death of Ching, the little Chinese bird which Mrs. H. E. Rice brought back from Shanghai this summer to grace the office of the H. L. Miller Company, 109 South Brand boulevard.

Ching was a stranger in a strange land and died one Sunday morning, much to the awe of her newly found mate, Dickie, an American canary, who lived in a cage on the opposite side of the room, but often visited Ching's pagoda-like palace.

Now, while Ching is being stuffed, Dickie sits mourning and refuses to play with Mr. Miller or Mr. Rice or Miss Smith. Very evidently it feels the loss deeply and is a "chagrined" bird.

Sad to say that Chang, another Chinese bird brought back by Mrs. Rice and presented to her sister, Mrs. B. C. Johnson of Los Angeles, escaped from its cage the other day and likely will stow away on a ship for Shanghai.

So, just as the slant-eyed merchant on the other side of the Pacific said, "Lil' Chinese bird no livee Amelikee. No likee, die, come home, Thankee. Bye bye."

GLASS IN BABY'S EYE
The left eye of Baby John Heath, son of John L. Heath of 206 North Verdugo road, is being saved by Mrs. Rice and presented to her sister, Mrs. B. C. Johnson of Los Angeles, escaped from its cage the other day and likely will stow away on a ship for Shanghai.

BANKING LATE ON SATURDAY HELD IMPRACTICAL

Exchange Club Decides to Abandon Its Agitation for Accommodations

The Glendale Exchange Club yesterday noon at its weekly luncheon in the Broadway Inn, 637 East Broadway, decided to abandon its agitation in favor of Saturday afternoon banking accommodations.

"It is the opinion of the bankers that the banks should not remain open Saturday afternoon or evening," asserted George H. Thomas of the Brand Boulevard Branch of the Los Angeles Trust & Savings Bank.

"It seems that this question was brought up some time ago by the Chamber of Commerce," he continued. "There was quite an extensive investigation and we found that there was practically no business being lost because the banks were not open."

Accommodating customers by cashing pay checks for them on Saturday afternoon was not a way for a merchant to get them into his store, according to Mr. Thomas. He commented on the fact that this accommodation often resulted in a sale which would be lost if the check were cashed at a bank.

Big Demand for Cash
W. C. Waring of the Army and Navy Store, 201 South Brand boulevard, admitted this fact, but said that it did not seem to make any difference how much cash they put in their cash register before the banks closed—usually it was all gone in payment for checks before business was over.

Mr. Waring inquired if it might not be possible for merchants to get cash from one of the banks about four or five o'clock Saturday afternoon. Mr. Thomas replied that he did not think any such arrangement could be made because the time lock on the vaults of the various banks prevented their safes from being opened until the regular time for opening Monday.

A recommendation was made that employees having pay checks to be cashed on Saturday afternoon should start checking accounts. This would enable them to pay their bills while the banks are closed by writing checks of their own.

Dr. Henry Harrower seconded the motion made by Mr. Thomas (Continued on Page 10)

Graduating Class of Nurses Given Party

Dr. and Mrs. H. G. Westphal of 337 North Isabel street, entertained Tuesday night with a very charming affair in honor of the members of the graduating class of the nurses' training school of the Glendale Sanitarium and Hospital. The rooms were attractively decorated with Shasta daisies, the class flower. Among the many novel games which were arranged for the evening's entertainment, was a characteristic decorative leads given in booklet, for which the first prize was awarded to Dr. Julia White.

The guests of honor were made happy with alluring fortunes told in rhyme. For the guessing story, "Mrs. Alphabet's Party," the prize was awarded to a group, of which Mrs. J. C. Harris was leader. "A trip around the world" to music, was also highly entertaining.

The guests of honor were Ethel Anderson, Lela Barnhart, Beatrice Christian, Leona Fisher, Judith Herling, Pearl Hodge, Elsie Lord, Lottie Marple, Celena chieffer, Anna Scheffle, Daisy Rose, Anna Peters, Marian Darrrell, Norma Rogers, James Moore.

Other guests were Dr. Julia White, Dr. and Mrs. Riley Russell, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Johnson, Dr. Maker, Dr. Pippey, Pastor and Dr. Lydia Paemelee, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Harris, Miss Emily Armstrong, Miss Veda Marsh, Miss Sue Cass, Miss Matilda Messenger, Henry Westphal, Jr., the host and hostess. Delicious light refreshments were served.

Bill Hart and Wife Now Living Apart

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 10.—Chivalry is a part of his daily life. William S. Hart, two-gun man of the movie world, made this declaration today in commenting on the separation from his wife, the former Miss Winifred Westover.

Mr. Hart insisted that he has always practiced in private life the chivalrous part he plays for the silver sheet.

Never has he harmed woman, he said. Never could he do so. Mr. and Mrs. Hart, it is admitted today, parted about three months ago and she is at present residing with her mother, Mrs. Clyde Westover, in Santa Monica.

Mrs. Hart, it is alleged, contemplates a suit for divorce, even though a substantial property settlement has been made.

"I'll stand on the summit of Mount Hollywood and defy the world to prove that I have ever done wrong to any man or woman," was Hart's dramatic reply to the inquiries concerning the divorce action.

Intimations are being made that Mrs. Hart will make an effort to secure a settlement in excess of $125,000, which sum Charlie Chaplin is rumored to have given his wife, Mildred Harris, when she secured her divorce.

"Big Bill" Hart is considerably older than his wife. While her tastes are said to have leaned toward the social swirl, his are said to have leaned toward the comforts of a fireside.

ALARM CLOCK A novelty in the line of alarm clocks is one measuring not much more than an inch square. There are over 2,000,000 different kinds of insects known to be now living on the earth.	WHO ESTIMATED? Gasoline runs about ten miles to the gallon; bootleg about ten funerals. The blindworm is not blind; neither is it a worm, but a kind of lizard.	LETTER FOLDER To help in folding business letters rapidly a device resembling an enlarged signet ring has been invented. Work ill done must be twice done. OLDER SCOUTS TO ATTEND MEETING AT STATE FAIR

Verdugo Hills Council May Be Represented at Big Session Next Month

"Without question the Older Scout Conference, which is to be held in Sacramento September 1 to 3 will be a wonderful experience to the boy who goes," says H. F. Benner, local Scout executive.

The Second Older Scout Conference is to be held in connection with the state fair in Sacramento, states Mr. Benner. It is not known for certain whether or not the Verdugo Hills District Council will be represented at the conference, but it is Mr. Benner's hope that plans may be completed so that one or two of the older scouts may be sent.

The only cost in addition to the railroad fare, which is $26.70, will be $1 for registration fee. Food, special trips, sleeping quarters and other details are all provided for by the committee on arrangements.

The entire conference is to be under the direct supervision of the Twelfth Regional committee. The personnel of this committee is Charles N. Miller of Los Angeles, chairman; Thomas L. Hosmer, Scout executive of Sacramento, assistant chairman; C. J. Carlson, deputy regional Scout executive, director of activities; Roland E. Dye, Scout executive of Orange county, director of Scout demonstrations; H. J. Beniss, Scout executive of the Oakland council, morale officer, and Elroy A. Thomas, Scout executive of the Sonoma County council, director of exhibitions.

Good Investment
Upon arriving at the state fair grounds, each scout will be given a special badge which will entitle him, free of charge, to see every part of the state fair.

"The Older Scout Conference will be not only a worth-while experience to the boy who goes," says Mr. Benner, "but also a good investment on the part of the one who sends him. He will meet with the best sort of older fellows from all parts of the state, and, in addition, will have the opportunity of exchanging experiences of living in a model camp, of fine feeds, inspiring talks, and the comradeship of the big campfire. It will be, indeed, a privilege to attend the conference."

Last year, says Mr. Benner, one of the features of the conference was a banquet given the boys by the Sacramento Rotary club, which takes a keen interest in all Boy Scout activities.

All parents who are interested in the conference, or who are considering sending their boys, will be sent a descriptive folder illustrating the aims, program, and general information on the conference, says Mr. Benner. A post card sent to H. F. Benner, Scout Executive, 108 North Brand Boulevard, Glendale, will bring the folder.

Why Protracted Strikes?
Good Things About Glendale
Harding From the Country
Encouraging Builders

By Gil A. Cowan

ALMOST every other word in the telegraphic dispatches these days has to do with one of the many strikes.

To Glendale this subject is not of utmost importance although eventually we will feel the indirect effects of the coal and rail strikes.

Our eastern friends, however, are at a point of desperation and something will happen and happen quickly to end the walkouts, lockouts, mob action and gun play.

It was shameful to hear of the Joliet battle; it was more shameful to hear of the Brooklyn gangsters who fired into a peaceful crowd of striking tailors.

The whole business is rotten and it is time for the federal law makers to take up the problem of intervening in strikes after twenty-four hours' walkout.

Did you digest all of the good things said about Glendale at the realtors' banquet Tuesday night at Verdugo Woodlands? What one speaker didn't mention the other did, by golly, and it all sounded swell to a confirmed booster like the writer.

But we tire of telling all of the good things about Glendale and Los Angeles county and southern California and California and the Pacific coast and the far flung west. So we are going to dig up some thoughts expressed in eastern newspapers and pass them on to you.

The following thought is from The New York Evening Post and his home to every person born of a small town and still hankering for that homey feeling of friendship found there:

Warren G. Harding, the country boy, rode into Marion, Ohio, on a mule through the mud. Warren G. Harding, the president of the United States, made his latest entry by motor car from the national capital on hard-surfaced roads. The contrast between the boy's lowly estate and the man's eminent position is scarcely greater than that between the physical condition of the United States then and now—a half century of progress for both man and commonwealth.

The president must have enjoyed himself at the hundredth anniversary of Marion's founding. He is, as the author of "The Mirrors of Washington" truly said, a small-town man. In other words, a neighborly person, and fitted by nature to enjoy a home coming. True, this native gift has been developed into an art, and towards the end of the front porch campaign its exercise became decidedly formal. Still, that was a stiff grind, while the present outburst of neighborliness is a vacation. So the president's expansion of soul in the midst of his home folks can be appreciated by all and will be envied by many hungry for the scenes of their youth.

Mr. Harding went back home to say, among other pertinent things, that the "Eighteenth amendment is the will of America and must be sustained by the government and public opinion, else contempt for the law will undermine our very foundations." This is the president's first public utterance on that subject, and from the standpoint of statesmanship it leaves nothing to be desired. It is not without significance that the president reserved this stout declaration of principle until he faced his own people in his home town.

According to a contemporary New Jersey's law exempting new dwellings from taxation for a period of five years has been held by the supreme court of that state to be unconstitutional, being in conflict with the provisions requiring uniform assessment and prohibiting private and special laws granting exclusive privileges or immunities. The law was enacted with the object of encouraging the erection of dwellings to relieve the housing shortage created as a result of the suspension of building operations during the war.

Do not believe all you hear, except when the voice of conscience is speaking.

BIG ATTRACTIONS ARE SCHEDULED FOR T. D. & L.

Manager Ralph Allan Makes Announcement of Features Booked for Theatre

Ralph Allan's announcement of the attractions soon to be seen at the T. D. & L. theatre is again of very special interest to the public. He has arranged for presentation at his popular playhouse some of the biggest offerings in the theatre-cinema world.

What Ralph Allan says follows: "A partial list of attractions, soon to be offered Glendaleans, patrons of the T. D. & L., and which are really 'big attractions' in every sense of the word are: 'Blood and Sand,' with the vivacious, dashing Rodolph Valentino; 'Nice People,' the masterpiece featuring Wally Reid, Bebe Daniels and Conrad Nagle; 'Her Gilded Cage,' the Gloria Swanson production; Edna Wallace Hopper in person at the T. D. & L.—the 61-year-old flapper (looks just like a girl of 19) to tell all the women of this city 'How to look young and be happy'; 'The Masquerader' with Guy Bates Post, the Richard Walton Tully famous story; 'Manslaughter,' another tremendous photodrama by De Mille of Paramount, with a marvelous cast; 'The Tailor-Made Man,' with Charles Ray, one of his finest; Peggy Hamilton personally staged 'Pageant of Fall Fashions,' with ten beautiful professional models; 'The Bonded Woman,' Betty Compson's biggest feature to date, and others.

Season Begins Early
"Our big season is beginning early this year. Usually it is September 20 before the real great shows break to the public. However, it is six weeks sooner this year. And it is with pleasure that we take opportunity and advantage of it and I know the people of Glendale will welcome the foregoing announcement."

"Watch the T. D. & L. The announcements to be made even in addition to this I know will be of continued interest to the public."

If you are in doubt, delay.

M. H. Kenaga Tells of Abraham Lincoln

To the rising generation the Lincoln-Douglas debate and Ford's Theatre are very far distant in history, but to M. H. Kenaga of Limon, Colo., who is visiting at 547 Oak street, they are very vivid recollections, for it was his fortune to first see Abraham Lincoln when he met Stephen A. Douglas in their great slavery debate in the late fifties, and also to see the great emancipator at Ford's Theatre, where he was later assassinated.

"I first saw Abraham Lincoln," said Mr. Kenaga, "with Stephen A. Douglas during their joint debate on the slavery question in the late fifties in Illinois. Next I saw him while attending services at Dr. Guerley's Presbyterian church in Washington, D. C., and I saw him again in the president's box at Ford's Theatre, where he was later assassinated."

"He frequently reviewed the army of Virginia, in which I served four years. I could not but notice his sad, anxious face as he rode down the line attended by a retinue of staff officers and men as guard of honor."

"Did I vote for him? I guess yes, both times. I always looked upon Abraham Lincoln as the greatest American patriot."

Name for New Park Is Sent From Afar

Even Poughkeepsie, N. Y., is concerned over the name of Glendale's new municipal park, according to a letter read at last night's meeting of the civic committee of the Chamber of Commerce suggesting that the new park be called Paradise park.

This suggestion, "considered along with 150 or more others," came from A. A. Harrison, a Poughkeepsie commission broker, who said in his note: "It reports from relatives of the undersigned to the effect that 'Glendale is a veritable paradise to live in,' ring true. I should think Paradise park an appropriate name for your new city park."

Mr. Harrison's relatives in addition to praising Glendale had sent him a printed list of suggestions for the park's name, which inspired the name of Paradise park.

When it comes to disputing the right of way with a telephone pole, the high priced car has nothing on the jitney.

PLENTY OF ACTION IS ASSURED IN SEA PICTURE

Packed With Punch, Thrills 'Hurricane's Gal' Showing On T. D. & L. Screen

Swiftly moving drama, packed with punch and thrills, enacted by a star and cast of exceptional caliber.

That describes "Hurricane's Gal," a First National attraction produced by Allen Holubar and starring Dorothy Phillips, now at the T. D. & L. Theatre. It is a "big" picture in every way, in our estimation, and should draw capacity houses at every performance.

"Hurricane's Gal" is a story of the bounding main, with Miss Phillips cast as Lola, who takes over the command of a smuggling schooner when her father, its owner, dies. The crew, elated at the death of the browbeating captain, is disillusioned when the daughter proves herself to be just as severe and relentless as her parent.

Irish Factions Fight to Win City of Cork

DUBLIN, Aug. 10.—A battle has begun between free state and irregular troops for possession of Cork, according to dispatches from the "front" today. Heavy fighting was reported at Youghal, twenty-seven miles east of Cork, where free state forces were landed from ships.

Free state soldiers are moving upon Cork from both the east and west. Irregulars in the city have set fire to many buildings. Abbeyfeale and Drumcollogher, the last strongholds of the irregulars in Limerick county, have been captured by free state troops. The free state advance continues at all points.

COMEDY DRAMA AT GLENDALE OFFERS MYSTERY, TOO

Young Married Couple Go to Inherited House—and Excitement Begins

If you like comedy-dramas that have an air of mystery, surrounded by an atmosphere of weird and uncanny happenings, don't fail to see "At the Sign of the Jack o'Lantern," which is at the Glendale theatre for the last times today.

"At the Sign of the Jack o'Lantern" is a story of one's relatives. It was written by Myrtle Reed, author of "Lavender and Old Lace" and many other popular novels.

The story is that of a young married couple who inherit their late Uncle Ebenezer's "Jack o'Lantern" house and go there to live. But no sooner than they have arrived, relatives from every section of the country pour in to pay them a visit. And then the excitement begins. Doors slam mysteriously at night, floor boards creak and phantom shadows glide through the halls at midnight. To top it all three is a romance that ends in a decidedly novel fashion.

Exhibition of Shoe Pitching at Picnic

The Glendale Horseshoe Pitchers' Club is to stage an exhibition and horseshoe pitching contest as one of the attractions at the municipal picnic to be held Wednesday, August 16, according to Frank H. Pilling, secretary of the Merchants' Credit Association which is sponsoring the picnic.

A fifty point walking game is to be played by the members of the club, and prizes for the winners are to be given by the Monarch Auto Supply Company.

The club is a member of the State Horseshoe Pitchers' Association, and of the national organization, and with their constant practice, members of the local organization are expected to furnish a closely contested game.

Prizes to be given the winners are as follows: first prize, one all weather rain and sun visor; second prize, one ten pound can of Lubriko grease; third prize, one five pound can of Lubriko grease. Other special prizes are to be given to those who make the largest number of rings.

The new Goodyear Cross-Rib Tread Cord

A Real Cord Tire for Small Cars at a Popular Price

The new Goodyear Cross-Rib Tread Cord in the 30 x 3 1/2 inch clincher type is a tire that the small car owner will warmly welcome.

It gives him, at a price lower than the net price he is asked to pay for many "long discount" tires, every advantage of quality cord tire performance, for it is a quality tire through and through.

It is made of high-grade long-staple cotton; it embodies the reliable Goodyear quality of materials; its clean-cut tread engages the road like a cogwheel.

The scientific distribution of rubber in this tread—the wide center rib and the semi-flat contour—gives a thick, broad surface that is exceedingly slow to wear.

The tough tread stock in this tire is carried down the sidewalls clear to the bead, making it rut-proof to an extraordinary degree.

In every particular it is a representative Goodyear product, built to safeguard the world-wide Goodyear reputation. Despite its high quality, and the expertness of its construction, it sells at a price as low or lower than that of tires which lack its important features.

The 30 x 3 1/2 inch Cross-Rib Cord clincher $12.50

This price includes manufacturer's excise tax
Goodyear Cross-Rib Tread Cord Tires are also made in 6, 7 and 8 inch sizes for trucks

CHAPTER IV

An Evil Genius

Thus, despite the bad beginning at Merriton Towers the weeks that followed were filled with happiness for Merriton. His acquaintance with Toinelette flourished and that charming young woman grew to mean more and more to the man who had led such a lonely life.

And so one day went itself into another with the joy of sunlight over both their lives. He took to going regularly to Withersby Hall, and became an expected guest, dropping in at all hours to play an hour or two in Toinelette's company, or else to have a quiet game of billiards with Brelrier, or a cigar in company with both of them, in the garden, while the sun was still up. He never mentioned the flames to them again. But he never investigated them either. He had promised Toinelette that, though he often watched them from his bedroom window, at night, he would not go near them, and he thought of that promise as Borkins and how he had lied to him about his uncle's disappearance upon that first night. Between Borkins and himself there grew up a spirit of distrust which he regretted, yet did nothing to counteract. In fact it is to be feared that he did his best at times to irritate the staid old man who had been in the family so long. Borkins did amuse him, and he couldn't help leading him on. Borkins, noting this attitude, drew himself into himself and his face became mask-like in its impassivity.

But if Borkins became a stone image whenever Merriton was about, his effusiveness was overpowering at such times as Mr. Brelrier paid a visit to the Towers. He followed both Brelrier and his niece when they went like a shadow. Jokingly one day Merriton had made the remark: "Borkins might be your factotum rather than mine, Mr. Brelrier; indeed I've no doubt he would be, if the traditions of the house had not so long lain in his hands." He was rewarded for this remark by a sudden tightening of Brelrier's lips, and then by an equally sudden smile. They were very good friends these days—Brelrier and Merriton, and got on very excellently together.

And then, as the days wore themselves away and turned into months, Merriton woke up to the fact that he could wait no longer before putting his luck to the test so far as Toinelette was concerned. He had already confided his secret to Brelrier, who laughed and patted him on the back and told him that he had known of it a long time and wished him luck. It wasn't long after this he was telling Brelrier the good news that Toinelette had accepted, and the two of them came to tell him of their happiness.

"So?" Mr. Brelrier said, quietly. "Well, I am very, very glad. You have taken your time, mes enfants, in settling this greatest of all questions, but perhaps you have been wise. I am very happy for you, my Toinelette, for I feel that your future is in the keeping of a good and true man. There are all too few in the world, believe me!"

"Toinelette, a friend awaits you in the drawing room. Someone, I fear me, who will be none too pleased to hear this news, but that's as may be. Dacre Wynne is there, Toinelette."

At the name a chill came over Merriton. "Dacre Wynne! And here! Impossible, and yet the name was too uncommon for it to be a different person from the man who always seemed somehow to turn up wherever he, Merriton, might chance to be. Sort of a fateful affinity. Good friends and all that, but somehow the things he always wanted, Dacre Wynne had invariably come by just before there was any more to be said. There was a rivalry in their acquaintanceship. And once, as mere youngsters of 17 and 18 years, there had been a girl, his girl, until Dacre came and took her with that masterful way of his. There was something brutally overpowering about Dacre, hard as granite, forceful, magnetic. To Nigel's calm, clean, wholesome mind, little given to morbid imaginings as it was, it had almost seemed as if their two spirits were in some stifling stranglehold together, wrapt about and intertwined by a hand operating by means of some unknown medium. And now to find him here in his hour of happiness. Was this close, uncomfortable companionship of the spirit to be forced on him again? If Wynne were present he felt he would be powerless to avoid it.

"Do you know Dacre Wynne?" he asked, his voice betraying an emotion that was almost fear. "Toinelette Brelrier glanced at her uncle, hesitated, and then murmured: "Yes—I do. I didn't know you did, Nigel. He never spoke of you. I—the you see he wanted me, too, Nigel, and I am almost afraid to tell him about us. But I—I have to see him. Shall I tell him?"

"Of course. Poor chap, I am sorry for him. Yes, I know him. Toinelette. But I cannot say we are friends. You see, I—Oh, well, it doesn't matter."

But how much Dacre Wynne was to matter to him, and to Toinelette, and to the public, and to far away Scotland Yard, and to the man of mystery, Hamilton Cleek, not they—nor any one else—could possibly tell.

They went into the long, cool drawing room together, and came upon Dacre Wynne, clad in riding things, and looking, just as Nigel remembered he always looked, very bronzed and big and handsome in a heavy way. His back was toward them and his eyes were upon a photo of Toinelette that stood on a carved secretaire. He wheeled at the sound of their footsteps and came forward, his face lighting with pleasure, his hand outstretched. Then he saw Merriton behind Toinelette's tiny figure, and for a moment some of the pleasure went out of his eyes. "Hello," he said. "However did you get to this part of the world? You always turn up like a bad penny. . . . What a time you've been Toinelette!"

Merriton greeted him pleasantly, and Toinelette's radiant eyes smiled up into his bronzed face. "Have I?" she said, with a little embarrassed laugh. "Well, I have been out riding—with Nigel."

"Oh, Nigel lives round here, does he?" said Wynne, with a sarcastic laugh. "Like it, old man?"

"Oh, I like it well enough," he replied. "At any rate I'll be obliged to get used to it. I've said good-bye to India for keeps, Wynne. I'm settled here for good."

Wynne swung upon his heel at the tone of Merriton's voice, and his eyes narrowed. He stood almost a head taller than Nigel—who was by no means short—and was big and broad and heavy-set, with a face that always felt at a disadvantage.

"So? You are going to settle down to it altogether, then?" said Wynne, with an odd note in his deep, booming voice. Toinelette sent a quick, rather scared look into her lover's face. He smiled back as though to reassure her.

"Yes," he said, a trifle defiantly. "You see, Wynne, I've come into a place near here. I'm—I'm hoping to get married soon. Toinelette and I, you know. She's done me the honor to promise to be my wife. Congratulate me, won't you?"

It was like a blow full in the face to the other man. For a moment all the color drained out of his bronzed cheeks and he went as white as death.

"I—certainly congratulate you, with all my heart," he said, speaking in a strange, husky voice. "Believe me, you're a luckier chap, Merriton, than you know. Quite the luckiest chap in the world."

He took out his handkerchief suddenly and blew his nose, and then wiped his forehead. Merriton noted, was damp with perspiration. Then he felt in his pockets and produced a cigarette.

"I may smoke," Toinelette said. "I've had a long ride, and a hard one. . . . And so you two are going to get married, are you?"

Toinelette's face, too, was rather pale. She smiled nervously, and instinctively her hand went out and touched Merriton's sleeve. She could feel him stiffen suddenly, and saw how proudly he threw back his head.

"Yes," said Toinelette. "We're going to be married, Dacre. And I am—oh, so happy! I know you cannot help being pleased—with that. And uncle, too. He seems delighted."

Wynne measured her with his eyes for a moment. Then he looked quickly away.

"Well, Merriton, you've got your own back for little Rosie Deverill, haven't you? Remember how heart-broken you were at sixteen, when she turned her rather wayward affections to me? Now—the tables have turned. Well, wish you luck. Think I'll be getting along. I've a good deal of work to do this evening, and I'll be shipping for Cairo, I hope, next week. That's what I came to see you about Toinelette. But I'm afraid I am a little late."

"Cairo, Mr. Wynne?" Brelrier had entered the room and his voice held a note of surprise. "We shall miss you."

"Oh, you'll get on all right without my friend," returned Wynne with a grim smile, and a look that included all three of them in its mock amusement. "I'm not quite so much wanted as I thought. Well, Nigel, I suppose you'll be giving a dinner, the proper 'stag' party, before you become a Benedict. Sorry I can't be here to join in the revels."

He took out his hand, Nigel took it, and wrung it with a heartiness and friendship that he had never before felt; but after all he had conquered! It was he, Antoine, who was going to marry. His heart was brimming over with pity for the man.

"Look here," he said. "Come and dine with me at the Towers before you go. Wynne, old man, we'll have a real bachelor party as you say. All the other chaps and you, just to give you a sort of send off. What about Tuesday? I won't have you say no."

For a moment a look of friendship came into Wynne's eyes. He gazed into Merriton's, and then returned the hand-grasp frankly. It was almost as though he understood this mute apology of Nigel's, and took it at its proper value.

"Thanks, old boy. Very decent of you, I'm sure. Yes, I'd like to have a peep at the other chaps before I sail. Just for old times' sake. I've nothing special doing Tuesday that I can't put off. And so—I'll come. So long."

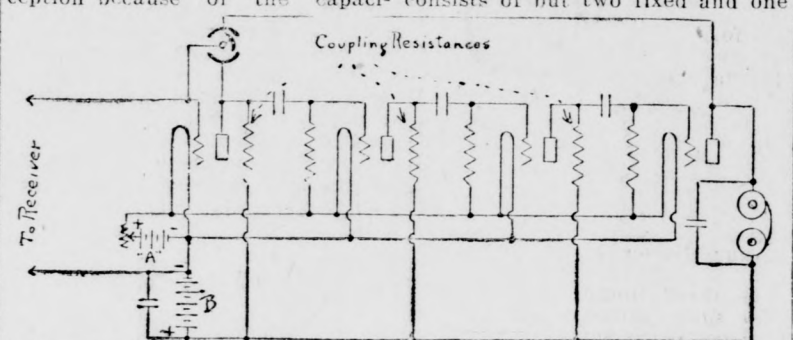

"Good-bye," said Merriton, rather relieved at Wynne's attitude—

CASCADE RADIO FREQUENCY AMPLIFICATION WITH CAPACITIVE FEED BACK

Reaction of a plate circuit upon a grid circuit to produce regeneration or autodyne effects may be accomplished by capacitive instead of inductive coupling of the two circuits. Care must be taken, however, to have the phase relations correct or there may be a weakening effect upon the strengthening effect upon the received signals with increased regeneration.

In the diagram the interstage coupling is secured by means of a capacitor. This is more suitable for long than for short wave reception because of the capacitances of the tubes themselves. In such a circuit an increase of potential applied to the grid of the first amplifier tube causes an increase of plate current but a decrease of plate potential in that tube because the drop across the resistance in the plate circuit increases with the current in that circuit. The potential applied to the grid of the second tube will therefore decrease in this case, as will also the plate current. The plate potential of the second tube will, however, increase. In a third tube there would be an increase of plate current and a decrease of plate potential, but in the fourth tube the grid circuit would produce positive regeneration and amplification of signals providing the reaction is properly controlled by the coupling condenser. The

They Say That

The greatest earthquake that New England has ever experienced since its settlement by the English, occurred on October 29, 1727. The day was Sunday. It was an unusually pleasant one for the season. In the evening the moon shone brightly. Shortly before 11 o'clock occurred a terrible noise, followed by a roar and a crash, and in about half a minute, before those who retired had time to become conscious of what had taken place around them, there came a sound as if gigantic cannons had rolled against each other from opposite directions.

Houses rocked and trembled as if they would collapse. Timbers worked in and out of joints. Windows rattled, tops of chimneys pitched and tumbled down, cellar walls fell in, and all movable things, especially in the upper rooms of the houses, tossed about. Most people got up in a moment, and rushed to the street in their night clothes, but the earth shook so much that they could not stand, and they were compelled to sit or recline on the ground.

A flash of light preceded the earthquake, followed by a rumbling as if of distant thunder. Cattle ran bellowing about the fields, being thoroughly frightened at this sudden and fearful commotion in the still hours of night. At 11 o'clock another shock came, less effective and more quiet than the first but heavy enough to keep the people in a state of fear. At 11:45 o'clock another came, and by this time the whole New England country was dressed and out of doors awaiting whatever nature might have in store for them. At Londonderry, N. H., when the shock came, practically the entire population flocked to the home of their minister, Rev. Mr. MacGregor, who did his best to comfort them. At Salem, Mass., all the inhabitants were up all night, and many of them refused to go to their homes again for several days. At Rowley the entire village flocked to the house of

Rev. Edward Payson, but as it was too small to admit them, the meeting house was opened at the midnight hour and there the remainder of the night was spent in prayer and supplication.

The shocks were repeated at 3 and 5 o'clock in the morning, but with abated force. In the towns along the Merrimack River the earthquake was felt more severely than in any other section of New England. In the island of New-Castle, near Portsmouth, N. H., the shock was so severe that it set all the bells a-tolling. This heightened the feelings of the people, and to the ignorant it seemed to be a knell rung forth by mystic hands.

The islands off the New England coast were shaken as much as the mainland, and the water of the ocean was in a state of great commotion. The earthquake had considerable effect upon the character of the land, springs and wells. Some upland was changed into quagmire, and in a few instances marshland was raised up, being afterward too dry for its native grass to grow upon it.

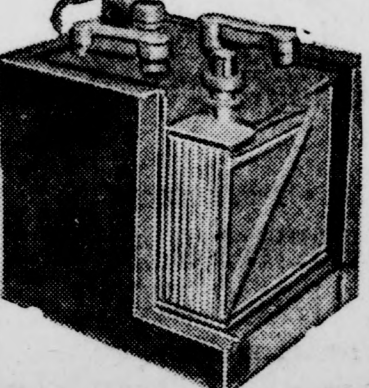

Chasms a foot or more in width were opened at some places. At other places where the ground opened, water boiled out of the crevices like a spring. Within three weeks the boiling ceased and the earth closed. The people were affected by this earthquake as they had never before, being fearful of divine judgments for their sins and lack of responsiveness to the call to religious duties. The clergy taught them that it

The lead plate battery for use as an A battery or filament lighting battery has many advantages which commend it as such. The one described here seems especially attractive, as it does away with some of the disadvantages of this type of battery. They are made in these capacities: Six volt 40 ampere hours, 6 volt 60 ampere hours, 6 volt 80 ampere hours and 6 volt 100 ampere hours. A new electrolyte is made use of, the semi-solid type, which does away with sulphation and which naturally obviates the spilling of the acid. On tests of abnormal discharge the plates have not buckled and the highest electrical efficiency and voltage maintenance was noted. Another feature is that the battery can stand idle indefinitely without injury to the plates. A hardwood case is furnished as stock, but at a small extra charge a hard rubber case is furnished. The price compares favorably with the ordinary lead plate type.

Uncle Wiggily Bedtime Stories

By HOWARD R. GARIS

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE CAKES

"Uncle Wiggily! Uncle Wiggily! Don't be in such a hurry!" called a voice to the bunny rabbit gentleman one day, as he was hopping through the woods.

"Ha! Don't be in a hurry! That's good enough advice to give, providing I know who gives it," thought the bunny uncle the Skilly Scallery Alligator, or the Pipsie-weah, I am in just as much of a hurry as ever I can be."

However, as the bunny gentleman looked along one side of his pink, twinkling nose he saw that it was Mrs. Twistytail, the pig lady, who was calling him, and not any of the bad animals who so often tried to nibble the bunny's ears.

"Oh, Mrs. Twistytail!" laughed Uncle Wiggily. "I'm never in too much of a hurry to speak to you."

"Well, I'm in something of a hurry myself this morning," went on the pig lady. "However, I saw you hopping past and remembered I had something to send Nurse Jane. Would you mind taking her this basket?" and the pig lady held out on with something inside covered by a white cloth.

"Of course I'll take it to Nurse Jane," offered Uncle Wiggily with a smile. "Has it anything in that might break, like eggs or toy balloons?"

"Nonsense!" laughed Mrs. Twistytail. "In the basket are just some cakes—" And then, before she could add anything more, a voice called to Mrs. Twistytail. "Excuse me, I'm wanted on the telephone," she said, quickly giving the bunny the basket and hurrying into her house.

"All right," answered Mrs. Longears. "As long as I know there are cakes in the basket I'll be careful of them. She might have told me what kind, though," he thought. "However, I suppose Nurse Jane will give me some when I get to the hollow stump bungalow."

Uncle Wiggily was hopping along with the covered basket, and he was thinking that perhaps it held chocolate cakes, when, all of a sudden, out from the bushes leaped the Fuzzy Fox.

"I guess you know what I want!" growled the Fox, none too politely. "I want one of those cakes I have in my basket," spoke the bunny, "though, to tell you the truth, the cakes are not mine, but Nurse Jane's."

"Nonsense!" barked the Fox. "I didn't come for cakes. I came to nibble your ears. But, since you have cakes I'll take one first and nibble your ears afterward!"

With that the impolite Fox thrust his paw into the basket and snatched out a brown cake. "They must be ginger cakes," thought Uncle Wiggily, catching a glimpse of the one in the paw of the Fox. Then the bad chap stuffed the whole cake into his mouth all at once, most greedily. But a moment later the Fox began to jump up and down and turn back somersaults, and he cried:

"Cake! You call that a cake! Oh, my goodness me!"

"Why, how strange!" thought Uncle Wiggily, as the Fox ran away, his tail between his legs, and white foam dripping from his mouth. "He must be mad—and such a fine cake, too. I wonder—"

But just then there was another rustling in the bushes and out popped the Woozie Wolf.

"I guess you know what I want!" growled the Wolf, none too politely.

"I have in my basket," said Uncle Wiggily, as kindly as he could. "Though after the Fox took one—" "Stop!" growled the Wolf. "I didn't come for cakes and you know it. I came to nibble your ears. But since you have cakes, and since you gave the Fox one, I'll take two!" And he did, thrusting his paw into the basket and taking out two brown cakes, which he stuffed into his mouth. But, no sooner had he chewed on the cake than the cakes howled: "Oh, double wow! You call those cakes! Oh, my goodness me!" and away he ran with his tail between his legs.

"Why, how strange!" thought Uncle Wiggily. "What kind of cakes can these be. I wonder—" But just then there was another rustling in the bushes, and out popped the Bob Cat.

"Here!" cried Uncle Wiggily, holding out the basket. "Have a cake before you do anything else!" And the Bob Cat was so surprised that, before he knew what he was doing, he had taken a cake. But, as before, no sooner had he chewed it than he turned three somersaults, white foam came out of his mouth, and he howled: "Oh, what a cake! What a cake!" and away he ran.

"This is very mysterious!" thought the bunny. "What kind of cakes can they be which made the bad animals all run away after eating them? I must take a look." And when Uncle Wiggily looked in the basket he laughed: "Ha! Ha! Ho! Ho! No wonder. They're cakes of soap! Ha! Ha!"

And so they were, some cakes of soap that the pig lady had made for Nurse Jane. And it served the Wolf, the Fox and the Bob Cat right, I think, for being so what might be called "snoopy."

So once again Uncle Wiggily's ears were saved, and if the pickle fork doesn't go swimming in the dish pan and splash water all over the butter knife I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and the black bugs.

FIND THE MISSING LINK

Have you noticed the great change in advertising methods in the past ten years? Whenever I turn over the advertising pages of some one of the handsome magazines which the advertisers make possible for us (the bare mechanical cost of a certain well known magazine is 50 cents per copy; it sells for 15c), I am impressed by this change in method.

This is what I mean. Once upon a time advertising was a very simple affair. In those days the advertiser had a picture of his product made, and either printed the picture with a blurb stating flatly that it was the best thing of its kind on the market, or perhaps gave a few reasons for its superiority.

A Guessing Contest
Of course there are some advertisers today who still follow that obvious course, but the most popular idea at present seems to be to get a picture that arrests the eye by its attractiveness and subtly fills the mind with a sense of luxury and beauty, and then link it up to the article advertised. I find it interesting to notice how long and tenuous this link often is. I defy anyone to guess from some of the pictures what the article to be advertised is.

Here are a few of the examples I have picked out at random:

Revolvers or Bacon?

A very lovely bride standing ready to throw her shower bouquet over a balcony. Now I cannot conceive of any article that a bride might not be advertising under the modern rules of the game. Nothing could be too alien to that picture. Name an article and I will tell you how to link it up. Somebody's ball bearings? Surely. They have been used on the car which her father gave her for a wedding present and her perfect day is made more perfect by the thought that that car is going to wear so much longer. A course in accounting? Why of course. That is how they were enabled to get married. He took that course in accounting and doubled his salary the first month, and hence the wedding bells. A brand of bacon? She is thinking of the first breakfast she will prepare for him. A revolver? She knows he has purchased the only make of revolver that is guaranteed to protect against burglars, and so she feels perfectly safe about her wedding presents and is able to smile that carefree smile.

As a matter of fact, the bride is advertising the articles of toilet ware which she received among her gifts.

Here are a few more examples. A mother leaning over the crib of an adorable baby. Will baby have beautiful hair when she grows up? Yes, if Molly uses somebody's soap in shampooing it. Mother and daughter in a lovely room exchanging confidences at the party. A certain kind of electric light bulb is supplying the light without which those confidences would lack savor.

Why the Butterfly?
A lovely lady coming down a staircase to join the gentleman in evening clothes who waits below. Somebody's glue. (Explanation, lovely lady has torn her dress and is going to mend it with glue.)

But the prize of the lot to me is the picture of a butterfly alighting on a spray of flowers which adorns the advertisement of somebody's physic. The advertiser has not bothered to explain the connection. He gives us the picture and a line of praise of the obliging qualities of his physic, and stands pat. If we want a connection we may supply it. He has done his part. Perhaps he is very subtle, perhaps his idea is that people will do just what I am doing, puzzle as to what the connection is, and in thinking about it fix the name of his product in their minds. I wonder.

OHIO WOMAN IS HELD AS HOSTAGE

—Copyright, Underwood & Underwood.

When Clarence Bell, Cincinnati, returned to his home he found his wife and 4-year-old son absent. Pinned to the back of a chair was this note: "We are holding your wife at Loveland, Ohio, until you appear before the mayor of said village of Loveland to face a charge of possessing intoxicating liquor. We advise your immediate appearance or a warrant will be sworn out for you. William J. Fritsch, deputy marshal." As a result a warrant, charging kidnaping, was issued against Fritsch, who is the third prohibition agent to be arrested in Cincinnati this year. CLEAN MILK

It is estimated that the United States and Canada have nineteen million cows, about one to every five inhabitants. But instead of every group of five persons having its own private cow directly at hand for service, most of us are miles and miles away from our milk supply. Some of the milk trains running into our big cities bring milk that makes a four hundred mile journey before it reaches the consumer.

This question of the distance traveled before the milk is used becomes of unusual importance because of the changes the bacteriological growth bring about in milk with the passage of a few hours—changes that are more marked at some seasons and under certain conditions favorable to germ cultivation.

When one considers the importance of milk as a food not only for infants but for all ages and ranks, it is very gratifying to observe the increasing care that is being taken for cleanliness in its production. It is safe to say that there is no more commonly used article of food which receives so much attention or upon which so much effort is spent to maintain absolute purity. Very gratifying decreases in the death rate of babies in our large cities are credited to the improved method of milk production.

In the modern dairy measures are now taken to exclude germ life from milk that would have been considered absurd twenty years ago. The dairy barn is kept exclusively for cattle. It must be light and well ventilated, so that each cow is allowed 5000 cubic feet of air. The floor, walls and ceilings are no longer festooned with cobwebs. The aim is to allow as few places as possible for dust to accumulate and the whole barn is whitewashed two or three times a year.

The milk is not allowed to stand in the stable, absorbing odors, but must be taken at once to a screened milk house where it is strained and cooled to 50 degrees or lower. At this stage the bacteriological contents of milk produced with care should be very low and the great problem is to keep the milk cool to the time of delivery. Where the producing dairy supplies a town only a few miles distant, this can be done without much trouble and the milk may actually reach the consumer with only a few thousand bacteria to the c. c. The one weak point in this form of milk supply lies in the possibility that some person may have imparted to the milk the germs of disease, which are of course, more dangerous than the ordinary germ life of milk. There is a way to prevent such a possibility, however, and that is by the method of pasteurization which heats the milk to 145 degrees and holds it at that heat for thirty minutes thus destroying all disease germs.

This method of pasteurization is still more helpful in preparing a pure milk which comes from the average farm instead of the modern dairy. The farmer has learned much in late years about preparing his milk, but he does not wear a clean suit for milking, or milk into a pail with a specially-designed cover. His milk has to travel long distances by wagon, then it stands on a station platform for one or two hours, then it travels perhaps two hundred miles in a milk train. Yet the fact remains that the farmer still supplies eighty per cent of the milk used in our great cities and that most of it is very good milk, indeed. It must be for it has to stand rigid tests as to its contents. Still there is one way of safety to the consumer; insist that all milk that enters your household be pasteurized.

BEAUTY CHATS

COMPLEXION MILK

A very fine and cooling lotion to whiten the skin and preserve its freshness is called Lait Virginal, or Virgin's milk. It is made by mixing one-half ounce tincture of benzoin with two drachms tincture of vanilla. To this one and one-half pints of triple rosewater is added. It should be added very slowly and thoroughly stirred and beaten to prevent curdling. At the end you should have smooth, milky emulsion.

This is a general formula for a bleaching complexion milk. With this as a foundation a great many elaborate formulas are built up. Blanched almonds, almond milk, almond oil, the juice of cucumbers, and various other things are added, but if you wish an easily made formula this one given above is really excellent.

Similar to this but a little more elaborate is the following Eau de Beauté, or beauty water.

Tincture of benzoin... 1 ounce
Tincture of musk... 2 drachms
Tincture of ambergris... 4 drachms
Rectified spirits... 5 ounces
Orange-flower water, 1 1/2 pints

The three tinctures are added to the spirit, mixed well and then added to the perfume water. If the perfumes are of the purest and best quality the result will be a milky emulsion which is cooling and refreshing to the skin, and effective in removing tan and freckles. Several famous beauties are supposed to have used this or a similar lotion. This, by the way, is particularly good for oily complexion and also as a means of softening hard water. A teaspoonful to a large basin is all that is necessary.

Book Reviews

A jolly story of mystery and conquered lunacy is "The Tattooed Arm," by Isabel Ostrander. Miss Ostrander needs no introduction that that wide and diverse public that loves nothing better than the digging out of a tale of this kind. She has already achieved many good detective stories, and her skill is still unimpaired.

The story of "The Tattooed Arm" is of a family named Hobart, living in the environs of New York. The family group comprises three brothers and a daughter of one of the three, Patricia. Patricia sees a strange mental failing creeping upon her father and uncles, and determines to escape, or evade the seeming cure.

Miss Hobart goes to New York where the family lawyer gives his advice. A detective is out to work upon the mysterious Hobart household and everything is nicely cleared up.

"The Tattooed Arm," if undertaken at bedtime, will probably rob the reader of the prescribed eight hours' sleep; but he will find the book worth it, provided he belongs to the mystery-devouring class of bookworms.

AUSTRALIAN AND FRENCH STARS WILL CLASH

Top Liners of Respective Teams to Meet in Single Match Events

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 10.—Luck being blind and for the most part impartial, the draw for the semi-final round of the Davis cup matches on the courts of the Longwood Cricket club today brought together Andre Gobert, of France, and Gerald L. Patterson, of Australia, top liners of their respective teams, in the first of two singles matches.

The other bracketed James O. Anderson of Australia and Henri Cochet of France, who is generally regarded as the weaker member of his team. He is only 20 years old and from all accounts, has something to learn about the gentle art of smashing a ball to secluded corners of the court.

Unless Gobert is able to dispose of the flighty Patterson, the Australians figure to get a running start in today's matches. In the event of both Patterson and Anderson winning their matches, only one more victory, either in the doubles tomorrow, or one of the singles matches on Saturday, will assure them of meeting Spain in the final round at Philadelphia next week.

On the whole, France is conceded little chance of going through to the final round.

George Kelley Makes Thirteenth Homer

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—George Kelley, first baseman of the Giants, knocked out his thirteenth homer of the season in the second inning of yesterday's game with the Reds. It was George's third homer in two days. Couch was pitching.

New World's Record Is Made by Trotter

CLEVELAND, Aug. 10.—A new world's record, it is claimed, was established at North Randall track here yesterday afternoon when Lee Trotter, driven by Ben White, made the last quarter of a mile in 28 1/2 seconds. This is said to be the fastest quarter ever trotted by a 3-year-old.

Babe Ruth Smashes Twenty-first Homer

DETROIT, Aug. 10.—"Babe" Ruth hit his twenty-first homer of the season in the ninth inning of yesterday's game with the Yanks. Cole was pitching for the Detroit Tigers. The bases were empty.

IN THE SPOTLIGHT OF SPORT By WOOD COWAN

Pittsburg's showing so far this season has not been up to expectations. Whether disagreement among the players causing a lack of team work, poor pitching or management has been the real reason, there's one thing certain, Outfielder Bigbee has not been laying down on the job.

Bigbee isn't exactly a newcomer, for he's been with the Pirates since 1916. But last season his brilliant fielding and battling brought him a great deal of deserved fame. So far this year he has been performing in an even more spectacular fashion. His hitting is better than .350 and he is one of the five best base stealers in his league.

Bigbee, born 26 years ago at Waterloo, Oregon, is mighty ambitious, and since leaving the old home town has proved a Waterloo to more than one opposing pitcher. He attended Oregon university where he not only starred as a baseball player, but was as good a halfback as that institution ever turned out.

He left college before finishing his course, going to the Portland club as a fielder in 1916. Later Tacoma sold him to Pittsburg. Since that time Bigbee's improvement has been very impressive in every department of the game. He has a good build for an outfielder, is lithe, active and very speedy. Stands 5 ft. 10 in. and weighs 160 pounds, and more important—possesses a keen, active brain.

Tagging All Bases

Slow work on the bases, loose playing in the field and inability to deliver the punch at the right time shot the Giants back into second place when the Reds, although out-hit, 12 to 10 won their second victory from the champions. Kelly hit his thirteenth homer, the third for him in two days.

The Braves and Cards divided a doubleheader, the Cards' victory in the second game giving them the lead in the National league.

The Yanks wound up their western trip by taking the ferocious Tigers into camp. The game was featured by Ruth's twenty-first home run, but the game was won when the Bambino banged it for the circuit.

The Indians routed the Red Sox in the final game, making it three out of four.

Walter Heidler Will Battle on August 18

Walter Heidler, pitcher with the Glendale Merchants' Baseball team, and an all-around athlete, is to appear as one of the principals in a boxing bout to be staged at the Hollywood Stadium on Friday night, August 18, it is stated.

Heidler is now training for the match and will probably enter the ring at about 155 pounds. His opponent in the Hollywood ring has not yet been announced.

The affair is to be given under the auspices of the American Legion, which promotes the matches in Hollywood.

COMPENSATION

The business of inter-city scene shifting among the players of the New York Yankees and the Boston Red Sox cannot be condoned by any standard ethics of good sportsmanship, yet it may be mentioned on behalf of the worthy Mr. Frazee that he has not always got the worst of the transactions.

As a matter of fact, one of his most diabolical moves happens to have been all for the best. I refer to the trade whereby the Yanks got Sam Jones and the Red Sox fell heir to the elderly Jack Quinn.

Now they are organizing a series of benefit tournaments for McDermott, and when the returns are in it is expected that Jack will be placed in surroundings where he will be comfortable and happy.

Regardless of what his status may be by the time Dempsey gets through shooting at it, Harry Wills has not lessened his standing in the community by taking on Tut Jackson. It is the custom of present-day box fighters to ignore all defies once they are assured of a fling at the title. Wills, however, seems to be under the erroneous impression that a fighter should fight.

The more I see of grudge fights the more I'm convinced the principals have a grudge against some one in the crowd.

The World Over

By FRANKLIN B. MORSE
PACIFIC SPORTS SERVICE

The statement issued by Professor Leslie J. Ayer of the University of Washington to the effect that the Pacific Coast Collegiate conference hereafter would take charge of the annual New Year's day East versus West football game relates to an action that game have considered advisable for a number of years. There are many however, who do not consider that the job has been cleaned up.

This has reference to the fact that the game also should be removed from Pasadena for the very indisputable reason that Pasadena's temperature is not fitted for the needs of football, being entirely too warm and secondly because the Tournament of Roses Committee can through no stretch of the imagination be considered as allied to collegiate affairs in any sense. Rather it represents a boost organization for the furtherance of that community and it has been able to commercialize and use the college teams for its own advertising ends.

To come to the point, not only should the Pacific Coast Conference have the game played under its auspices, but the game should be played on a collegiate campus and entirely removed from the control of the Pasadena committee. If that committee can get any other pair of teams to compete for them all well and good, but the real East and West game should be a collegiate and not a commercial and advertising affair which merely uses the collegians as a means of exploiting a community.

As to educating the Eastern institutions up to the East versus West game, that is a horse of another color. There is no question that the fact that it has been taken out of the hands of exploiters of real estate will tend to the East looking more favorably on the proposition, but the removal of it from Pasadena on to college grounds must also be accomplished. Eastern teams on the first of January come out of a frozen country and there is serious objection to going into a semi-tropical climate to engage in an important championship contact such as this is generally considered to be.

Another thing, if the thing ever is seriously regarded by Eastern teams, there is no question that the Western teams will have to take their turn going East to play. Manifestly it would be unfair for the East always to play on hostile ground. Some plan such as the champion community being allowed to play at home while the challenger should do the traveling might be agreed. Thus Eastern teams would be obliged to play on the Pacific coast until they took the title East. Then the shoe would be on the other foot. There is no question that no difference of opinion would arise as to the equity of this arrangement.

SPORTS CHATTER

By BILL UNMACK
PACIFIC SPORTS SERVICE

Up to the close of the eighteenth week of play in the Pacific Coast baseball league, Sunday, August 6th, a total of 411 home runs has been scored. Salt Lake easily leads in the matter of team totals with one hundred seven complete circuits and Sand of Salt Lake is the high individual scorer in the league with nineteen homers to his credit.

The home runs scored by the various teams in the league follow, Salt Lake 197; Portland 74; Vernon 51; San Francisco 49; Seattle 39; Sacramento 32; Los Angeles 20 and Oakland 22.

While Sand of Salt Lake leads in home runs he is being given a close race as no less than four other batters are right behind him with 18 each. These men are High of Portland; Strand and Schick, Salt Lake and Griggs of Los Angeles.

Walter Hoover, Duluth Rowing Club, 1921 national sculls champion did not defend his title at Philadelphia last week. Hoover, won the famous Diamond Sculls championship at London, which is the amateur championship of the world. The Duluth lad could not get back to the U. S. in time to properly prepare for the national event last week and as a consequence did not defend his title, the event being won by Paul Costello of the Vesper club of Philadelphia.

Now the Costello supporters want their champion to row Hoover and the latter will accommodate the American champion at ment, Jack McDermott. Jack virtually has been a public charge for five or six years.

His mind broke down under harsh criticism of remarks he is alleged to have made about some British golfers when he was champion in 1912. He was put up at a sanitarium in Philadelphia for a year or so and his expenses met by private individuals.

These contributions ceased rather abruptly, however, and the man whom many considered the greatest golfer of his day was sent to a State institution. He has remained there since.

Now they are organizing a series of benefit tournaments for McDermott, and when the returns are in it is expected that Jack will be placed in surroundings where he will be comfortable and happy.

Regardless of what his status may be by the time Dempsey gets through shooting at it, Harry Wills has not lessened his standing in the community by taking on Tut Jackson. It is the custom of present-day box fighters to ignore all defies once they are assured of a fling at the title. HAVE YOU EVER

Step into a house and been so completely enthralled with its beauty that you felt you must have it for your very own home? Just such a home is this. I have never seen but one other in Glendale of like charm. See it if you contemplate buying. Lot five rooms are large and airy—and the closets!—they are everywhere. There are more real conveniences here than in many houses costing twice as much: hardwood floors thruout, built-in bath, woodstone floor in bathroom, valparaiso finish. A fireplace where you can roast marshmallows over a wood fire; gas plugs in every room. In addition to the usual lighting fixtures there are three wall bracket attachments in each room. The kitchen would cause any good woman to thrill with pleasure.
Please do not think I am over-rating this, for I am not.
I haven't the words to tell you how nice it is. It faces west on a beautiful lot that commands a view of all Glendale. The present owners built this for a permanent home and it is well constructed thruout. Price
$6500, $2000 will place you in possession.

BUNDLE OF PAPERS SMASH SHIELD, DRIVER HURT

Sunshine Corners Is Scene Of Unusual Accident to Glendale Motorist

Struck by a heavy bundle of newspapers which crashed through the windshield of his auto, being hurled from a rapidly moving newspaper delivery truck, R. L. Coe, 610 East Broadway, Glendale, was severely injured yesterday afternoon. The accident occurred near the intersection of Broadway and Colorado boulevard, at Sunshine Corners.

Face Cut by Glass
The bundle hurtled through the windshield of Mr. Coe's auto, cutting his face and stunning him so that he momentarily lost control of his car. He regained control of the machine just in time to avoid wrecking it.

Mr. Coe was taken to a physician's office in Glendale where his injuries were treated. Both of his eyes were nearly closed, in addition to painful cuts about the face and head.

The truck bore license number 283782, according to the police report which failed to give the name of the driver.

Only the permit for a residence was issued yesterday in Eagle Rock. Dan Carney of 125 Ellenwood drive secured a permit to erect a six-room house and a garage on property at 118 North Townsend avenue, in the Dahlia Heights district.

Mr. Carney is to build the house himself. The cost of the project is estimated at about $3,000.

The house now under construction for Edith Liles at 268 North Acacia avenue will cost more than the original estimate of $4,000, it has been discovered.

Exchange Club Decides to Abandon Its Agitation for Accommodations

(Continued) that the matter be dropped. He congratulated Mr. Thomas upon the "adroitness" with which he had the proceedings abandoned and said that he thought the officials of the banks should be notified of the manner in which Mr. Thomas looks after their interests during his lunch hour. Laughter followed.

George H. Whitaker, proprietor of the Glendale Pharmacy at 400 East Broadway, and chairman of a special entertainment committee, reported that plans were going forward at full tilt for the big carnival which is to be held in the new municipal park under the auspices of the Glendale Exchange Club on Admission Day.

An invitation was extended by Dr. Harrower to members of the club on Sunday, August 20, to attend his new summer cottage called "Sandy Nook" at Santa Monica Palisade Beach.

Discuss Many Matters After some discussion, it was voted to continue the business session of the organization each week to the time between 12:15 and 1 o'clock in order that the meetings might adjourn as soon after 1:15 as possible.

Congressman Walter F. Lineberger will attend next week's session of the club, according to an announcement by Postmaster D. Ripley Jackson, who asserted that the invitation has been accepted.

F. E. Hoyt of 205 East Broadway reported that he had visited a meeting of the Progressive Club of Long Beach recently at which considerable hilarity reigned on account of the fact that the club had bought stock in an oil well which "had come in" the night before.

A. T. Cowan, publisher of The Glendale Evening News, who was a guest of Dr. Henry R. Harrower, commented upon the alertness demonstrated by members of the club during the luncheon. He said that they were to be congratulated upon the interest they displayed in its affairs. Mr. Cowan remarked that a club whose members are always waiting for "the other fellow" to take the initiative seldom amounts to anything.

E. F. Heisser, secretary of the Independent Lumber Company, expressed his approval of the proposal to have a new Southern Pacific depot built across the street from his property at the end of Milford street.

Capt. W. B. Kelly, president of the club, called attention to tonight's mass meeting to discuss the high school situation and asked as many members of the club to attend as possible. He stated that he intended to present a site on the northwest side of the city for the consideration of the high school board of trustees. The attendance prize for the luncheon was won by Dr. Henry R. Harrower. It was a small alarm clock.

Among the other members of the club present were the following: Fred S. Hill, Dr. James A. Belyea, E. B. Sutton, George B. White, William H. Block, T. C. McConnell, Ed N. Radke, B. C. Cline, Norton P. Buck, S. F. Bell, George M. Lindsey, and W. Q. Widdows.

Banker and Active In Many Civic Affairs; Now In Glendale on Visit

(Continued) today. For instance the driving wheels on the locomotives were not more than three feet in diameter. The coaches were shorter, and a train usually included two or three first class coaches and another for second class passengers.

Although Mr. Cotton frankly admits that he retired twenty years ago, he is still considered an active business man by his associates in Nebraska City. He drives his own car and very proudly announces that he is now owning his third Buick six.

The high esteem in which Nebraska City holds him is shown in a recent honor conferred on him by the city telephone company. Mr. Cotton was at one time promoter and part owner of the first telephone service in the city and a short time ago when the telephone company's fine new offices were opened, Mr. Cotton was asked to be present to release the lines that formally installed the new modern system.

Four Generations In his reminiscences Mr. Cotton includes mention of his relationship to Cotton Mather, colonial divine and author, and also that his grandfather served in the Revolutionary war and his father in the war of 1812.

Mr. Cotton shared honors with his sister at her birthday dinner last Sunday in Brookside Park, when a company of seventeen relatives met to greet Mr. Cotton and congratulate Mrs. Beman on the occasion of her birthday.

There were four generations represented at the picnic outing. Mrs. Beman, her daughter, Mrs. Lloyd Jackson of 315 West Los Feliz road; her grand-daughter, Mrs. A. E. Randall, 701 North Isabel street, and her great grandchildren, Laura Louise, Jack and Rosebud Randall. Mrs. Beman's son, A. E. Beman and family were also present.

Assassins of Wilson Are Hanged in London LONDON, Aug. 10.—Reginald Dunn and Joseph O'Sullivan, assassins of Field Marshal Henry Hughes Wilson, chief of the British imperial general staff, were hanged in the yard of Wandsworth jail this morning, just forty-nine days after the crime was committed.

The jail was under heavy guard of soldiers throughout the execution. Hundreds of Irish sympathizers had spent the night in adjacent streets reciting prayers and singing hymns. Squads of mourners passed back and forth before the jail carrying lighted candles.

According to the jail warden, the men died gamely and neither one made a statement before the trap was sprung.

REALTY BOARD TO TRUSTEES OF HIGH SCHOOL DISCUSS MEET WEDNESDAY IN WOODLANDS BOND PROJECT

Accepts Invitation to Use Newport Pavilion; Discuss High School Issue

(Continued) rapid growth it had experienced. Now, he stated, it is time to add again to the system, and to add enough to keep it on a broad and comprehensive basis, rather than a hand-to-mouth affair.

Tells of Propositions Three propositions are to come up for consideration at the mass meeting which is to be held in the Glendale Union High school tonight, he stated. They are: First, the building of a new plant with a capacity of 2,500 students; second, the purchase of a site for future school use in the northwest section of Glendale; third, the reorganization of the whole Glendale school system to include junior high schools.

Last year, stated Mr. Moyse, the enrollment of the high school increased between 38 and 40 percent. With the school already crowded, and with a similar increase to be expected this year, something must be done at once. He suggested the voting of additional bonds to erect a high school which would accommodate 2,500 instead of 1,500 students. Also, $260,000 added to the present $600,000 bond issue would provide the necessary amount, it was stated. Mr. Moyse also spoke in favor of the establishment of the junior high school system and the purchase of the site in northwest Glendale for high school uses a few years from now.

Considerable discussion followed Mr. Moyse's talk. Several questions were asked of Mr. Moyse regarding the costs of the different projects.

Urges Investigation After several communications had been read by Secretary E. P. Hayward, discussion of the schools was resumed. President Thom stated that, in his opinion, it was the duty of every member of the board to attend tonight's meeting and help to work out the best solutions.

Charles B. Guthrie advised real estate men to look at the business side of the project. "It behooves every taxpayer to look into the business methods employed in the administration of our school system," stated Mr. Guthrie. He spoke of the large proportion of the taxes which goes to the schools, and argued in favor of getting down to more efficient methods.

"I do not believe in large schools," he stated. "I know that every person who has ever taught school will bear me out in saying that the efficiency in large schools is below par."

Consider the expenses of a school system carefully and then work out the most efficient administrative plan. The school system is a great advertisement. Hundreds of persons are coming to Glendale with their children on account of the schools here. But if you hand a new arrival a tax bill with a school tax such as we will have soon at the present rate, he alone can determine whether or not it is too much."

Depot Facilities E. D. Yard next addressed the board on the efforts now being made to secure appropriate depot facilities for Glendale from the Southern Pacific railroad. He read the petition which has already been endorsed by a number of civic organizations, asking the railroad commission for some relief in the matter of a depot. A motion to endorse the petition was passed.

A communication from City Manager William H. Reeves stating that various city officials and the chief of police would like to meet the board for a probe of the actions of police officers whose conduct was said to have been commented upon unfavorably at previous meetings of the board.

No charges against officers were made, but a motion was passed inviting the city council, chief of police and other city officials to meet with the board at some future date to discuss the actions of certain legal policemen.

It was proposed that the families of the members of the board should be included in the next meeting, to be held Wednesday in the new park, in conjunction with the municipal picnic. It was then that Mr. Twining made the generous offer to again entertain the board at the Newport pavilion.

Cabinet Approves Poincare's Policy PARIS, Aug. 10.—Premier Poincare's uncompromising policy of "productive forfeiture" against Germany, which is under consideration by the inter-allied indemnity conference in London, was approved by the French cabinet today.

President Millerand presided at the cabinet meeting. After approving the premier's report on a telegram from London, he sent to M. Poincare saying his policy had the support of the French government.

Board States Its Views on Situation; Mass Meeting Takes Place Tonight

(Continued) cal viewpoint it will be quite a saving to build the larger plant at this time, instead of building it in piece meal.

The trustees, after a careful investigation, have reached the conclusion that to build the proposed plant on Verdugo road to take care of 2500 students, will cost about $860,000, which would mean that it would take approximately $260,000 from a new bond issue to complete the plant.

Site In Northwest The next subject under consideration is a site in the northwest section of Glendale. Most citizens, knowing the growing of our district and with a knowledge of the rapid advance in real estate values will recognize that unless we provide a site in that section soon, there will be none available at any price. With a senior high school on Verdugo road and Broadway, one junior high school in the present high school plant and another in the new intermediate school building at Park and Glendale avenue it will be necessary to have another high school plant in the northwest and maybe other sections, before many years. Among the sites offered, one may be chosen, which will answer the needs from both an educational and economical viewpoint.

The last three subjects are so closely allied as to be answered at one time. The use of the present plant is of utmost importance, for if put to the proper use, it answers two problems at the same time. The last mass meeting unanimously instructed its retention, which brings up the subject of its use.

If used when available as a junior high school, it will not only take care of part of the high school enrollment, the ninth grade, but will also relieve the congestion in the grade school systems of the districts, by taking care of their seventh and eighth grades, as it will give them the new Broadway and also the Wilson avenue schools in Glendale, to be used for the grades from one to six and other schools in other parts of the district, will also be available for these grades. It is a fact that something has to be done at once to take care of the congestion in the grade schools of the entire district and even now parts of the district are planning bond issues to take care of it.

By establishing the junior high school system, the proposed bond issues could be reduced materially. On a basis of the new valuation, available after Aug. 10, this year, this high school district will have a bonding capacity of $550,000. The trustees are not asking for the limit, but with $260,000 additional to complete the new high school and say, $90,000 as a limit for a northwest site, a bond issue of $350,000 would take care of both.

Synopsis of Proposition A synopsis of the proposition as viewed and recommended by the trustees is as follows:

That the mass meeting instruct the high school trustees to call a bond election to vote on bonds to the amount of $350,000. This bond issue, if voted, to be used as follows:

First—That a site in the northwest section of Glendale be purchased.

Second—That the money left be used to complete the proposed high school plant on Verdugo road. Furthermore, it be the sense of the meeting that the high school trustees inaugurate a system of junior high schools, as soon as the present high school plant is available for use for that purpose.

Third—That a preferential ballot be presented to the voters at the time of bond election with all the sites, which have been offered to the trustees, with proper options, listed thereon, with the understanding that the site receiving the majority of votes be the one purchased by the trustees.

With the above question answered, the Union High school district can be assured an up-to-date school system which will enable the school authorities to handle the educational question, to compare favorably with the district in the state for about five years, if normal growth continues.

Respectfully submitted to the voters of the Glendale Union High school district, with our recommendation of their approval.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES, Glendale Union High School District.

Dr. and Mrs. Durfee at Home From North

Dr. and Mrs. I. H. Durfee of 114 East Los Feliz Road and their guest, Dr. Durfee's sister, Mrs. Lillian Richmond of Warren, Ohio, have just returned home from a most enjoyable vacation motor trip north. They traveled by way of the coast route and returned through the valley. In the north they were guests of relatives in Placerville.

One interesting pleasure trip taken by the Durfees and Mrs. Richmond while in the north was to Coloma, where gold was first discovered in California. There they saw the bronze statue of a pioneer figure erected by the Native Sons of California to James W. Marshall, the discoverer of gold.

Mrs. Richmond plans to leave shortly for her home in Ohio.

O. M. Newby Makes Statement About Site

Misunderstandings in regard to the Hahn property as a high school site are prevalent according to O. M. Newby of 803 North Pacific avenue who has secured an option for this estate which will be considered at tonight's mass meeting.

"I will get no commission out of this deal absolutely," he asserted with emphasis. "S. C. Hahn will take an affidavit that he is paying no commission to anyone. My sole idea is to have the school out there and I want this site to be considered solely from the standpoint of adaptability and price. I have considered it as though I were going to buy it for myself. I have no axe to grind."

The property referred to by Mr. Newby consists of twenty-five acres which are offered for $50,000. It is bounded by a frontage of 1825 feet on Kennilworth road, north of the Burbank car line, 832 feet along Glenwood road, 900 feet on the west side and 1000 feet along the Burbank car line. The slope of the ground is about one and a half degrees from east to west. From north to south it is practically level.

"Leveling it for athletic purposes would practically cost nothing," said Mr. Newby. "That is a matter of quite an item. You can readily see that the property is accessible from a transportation standpoint."

It is different to make the psychologists believe it, but the explanation for the crime wave is that the country is full of criminals.

Lefty Herman Hits High Among Western

Floyd "Lefty" Herman, former local high school star athlete, continues to occupy a leading position among the batters of the Western league. Playing a bang-up game in the outfield for the Omaha club, Herman's average was compiled at .476, which is almost an unbelievable figure. In four consecutive games in which he recently appeared Herman poked out fourteen safe hits in twenty times at bat, for a total of twenty-two bases. This is a feat that is rarely equaled in any league.

Ludwig Gossman of Sycamore Canyon road, this city, states that "Lefty" is practically sure of a berth with Ty Cobb's Detroit Tigers next season. He is now the property of the Tigers.
